Think “outside the pocket” when creating your pocket pages by including larger photos and adhering embellishments to the outside of the pockets!

1. I love layering when I scrapbook and you can still layer when you pocket scrapbook. Go ahead and break the rules, use a larger photo or embellishments to the outside of the pockets! I used two sizes of pocket pages to create this 3 page spread.

2. The first page has my title which is simply created by using a ready made journaling card and a sticker. I typed my journaling on a card, slipped that into a pocket and attached a cork die cut to the outside of the pocket using Glue Dots adhesive (use a strong adhesive, not white glue, white glue will not work well on plastic pocket pages.)

3. For the left page of the inside spread I again attached some cork die cuts and stickers to the outside of the pocket. I also added another photograph next to my journaling by attaching the photo on top of the pocket page. This also helps me feel less constrained by the pocket sizes since my photo is a non traditional size. I printed it out the size I wanted and simply placed it at an angle over top the the journaling cards.

4. I wanted to use a large picture on the last page, but my pockets would only allow for a 6x4 photo. I solved the problem by simply making my photo 6x8 cutting it in half and then slipping it into the the two stacked 6x4 pockets. To further the feeling that its one large pocket I layered title stickers and a cork die cut over the entire photo (Napa Valley go!).

5. To finish the spread I added a white shipping tag, again on top of my pocket page. I typed my journaling on the tag and added a bit of layering to the title by stamping a simple banner image in light blue, then I layered alpha stickers over top the stamped image.
